

Università Federico II Napoli

Salvatore Panico is an experienced chronic disease epidemiologist. Lifestyle etiology of chronic diseases (mainly cardiovascular and cancer) has been his major research interest. He has been participating in several large population studies all over Europe (including Seven Countries Study, Progetto CUORE- Epidemiologia e Prevenzione delle malattie cardiovascolari in Italia, EPIC (European Investigation into Cancer and Nutrition) and in largest experimental studies on the effects on prognosis of the modification of dietary habits in patients with breast cancer (Progetto DIANA). He is currently member of the Supervisory Board of the INNOSTARS Co-Location Center for the European Institute of Innovation and Technology of the European Union.